DESCRIPTION:

Does your cruise ship stop at the port of Shimizu (Japan)?

Shimidzu, Mt. Fuji 5th Station

The port of Shimizu stretches for many kilometers along the coastline of the Pacific Ocean. The resort of Shizuoka is about 150 kilometers southwest of Tokyo and is famous for its hot springs, beautiful coastlines, beaches, mild climate and stunning views of Fuji-san (san is a volcano, not a mountain, but is often called a mountain).

The view of Mount Fuji soaring above the surrounding area belies the fact that Shimizu is not only a scenic area, but also a culturally significant one. In addition to Fuji, registered as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2013, the area also overlooks Miho-ne-Matsubara, a pine grove that is part of the World Heritage Site. These assets combine with the area's temperate climate to mark the port as one of Japan's top attractions.

Shimizu's rich cultural heritage is rooted in the surrounding area of the Shizuoka region, as the home of Tokugawa Ieyasu, founder of the Edo Shogunate after his resignation from government. A collection of historical buildings in the surrounding area, such as Kunozan Toshogu Shrine (designated a National Treasure by the Japanese government), Sumpu Castle Park, and Shizuoka Sengen Shrine, paint a fascinating portrait of the life and achievements of this important historical figure.

Mt. Fuji Subaru Line 5th Station

One of the first associations with Japan is Fuji-san. Any tourist expects to see the famous Fuji volcano. But no... Meeting Fuji is a great success! Fuji-san has a habit of hiding from prying eyes with clouds even on a sunny summer day.

Coming to Japan and not seeing Fuji is the same as coming to Moscow and not seeing the Kremlin.

At 2500 meters above sea level, the last place to get a breathtaking view of the summit. This is also the last place where you can safely enjoy your stay on the slopes of Fuji-san.

Climbing Fuji-san is only for one and a half to two months a year (July-August), brave souls begin their climb from the 5th station of Fuji-san.

We will make the ascent (by car) with a visit to the 5th station. The transport road ends at the fifth station, which since ancient times has been called the “border between heaven and earth” or “the beginning of heaven and earth.” This may be due to the extraordinary moon-like landscape.

This site is the oldest of the 3 separate volcanoes that make up what is now Mount Fuji.

All of Japan is two kilometers lower and is dying from the stuffiness, and at the 5th station the steam from your mouth is swirling and swirling... You'll have to quickly put on sweatshirts/windbreakers/down jackets.

At the fifth station, tourists usually spend 30 - 60 minutes admiring nature in the forest border.

In clear weather there are breathtaking views of the mountain and the five lakes of Fuji. It is also home to the Komitake Shinto Shrine, where the deity of Mount Fuji is worshiped. It is from this place that the ascent to Fuji-san, 3,776 meters high, begins. The highest and most sacred mountain in Japan. Mount Fuji is best admired from afar, but seeing it up close on clear days and the experience of climbing during the morning hours among other travelers from all over the world is sure to bring only positive emotions.

Finish off with a refreshing soak in the mineral-rich natural hot spring at the top of Mount Miho, overlooking Mount Fuji, with indoor and outdoor baths. The thermal spring is useful for: arthritis, back pain, neuralgia, bruises, sprains, fatigue recovery, weak flabby and dry skin, etc.

Here we invite you to lunch/dinner (kaiseki ryori) with fresh seasonal seafood caught from Suruga Bay.

For those who have more time, you can continue the tour or start over...

Lake Kawaguchiko Lake Kawaguchiko is the largest among the five lakes of Fuji.

Panoramic Kachi Ropeway Characters from the famous Japanese fairy tale Kachi kachi yama await guests. With the Kachi Kachi Ropeway, you can enjoy a bird's-eye view of Fuji-san and Lake Kawaguchi during a 3-minute cable car ride. The height of Mount Tenjo is 1075 meters above sea level. At the observation deck and/or at the Tanuki tea house you can try signature dumplings and coffee. And also ring the bell “Tenjo no Kane”, which brings good health and mature love to loving people.

Nenba Saiko - A unique Iyashi no sato folk village with the atmosphere of old Japan. This is a real village that was destroyed by a landslide. This is an open-air museum, which has 21 houses that have preserved the original appearance of medieval Japan. The roofs are made of wood and covered with rice
